

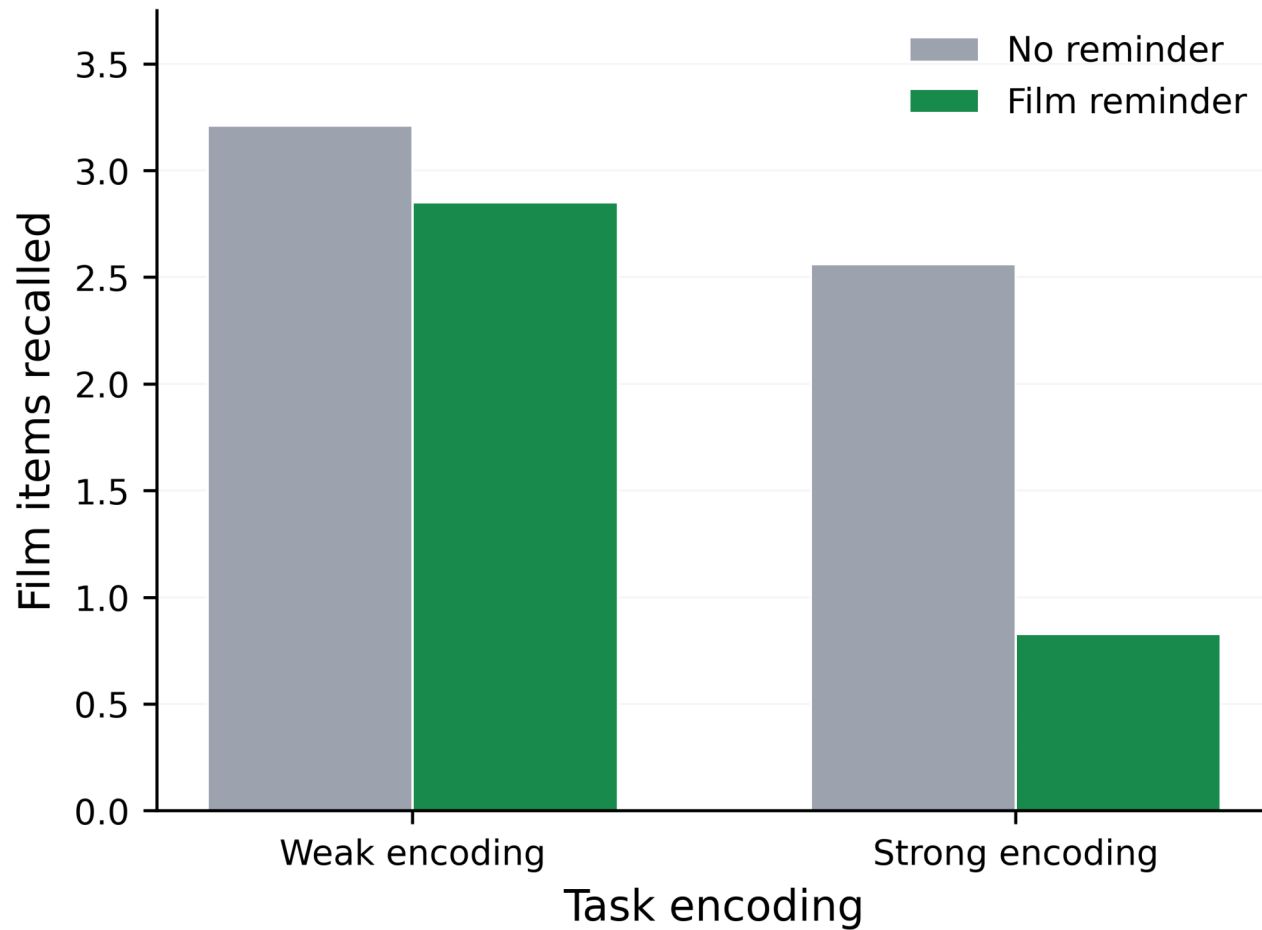

Figure 2. Film recall falls most when a film reminder is followed by strong task encoding.

Bars show expected film items recalled during unguided retrieval after a supplied film cue before recall begins. When task encoding is weak, film recall is relatively similar with and without a film reminder. When task encoding is strong, the film reminder produces a larger loss of film recall, showing that reminder reinstatement matters most when subsequent task items are strongly encoded.